Edward and Lane on European Union Law

David Edward, University of Edinburgh and European Court of Justice 1989–2004 and Robert Lane, University of Edinburgh, UK

‘It is a real pleasure to see the publication of the third and much enlarged edition of Edward and Lane on European Union Law. It clearly and succinctly explains the essential features of the institutional and substantive law of the EU and can be strongly recommended to students and practitioners alike.’

– Aidan Robertson QC, Brick Court Chambers, UK

A comprehensively updated and expanded new edition of a classic text, this authoritative volume provides expert analysis on the key issues across all areas of European Union law – including its constitutional, procedural and substantive aspects. Importantly, the book incorporates the Treaty of Lisbon reorientation and immediate post-Lisbon developments. Throughout the book there is extensive reference to primary sources (Treaty, legislation, case law) and to issues of national adaptation which, together, bring a depth of understanding and analysis to this increasingly complex discipline.

Private Enforcement of Antitrust
Regulating Corporate Behaviour through Collective Claims in the EU and US

Arianna Andreangeli, University of Edinburgh, UK

Enhancing private litigation as a means of boosting the detection of anti-competitive behaviour and of remedying the harmful consequences of these practices on consumers has been at the forefront of the EU Commission agenda for a long time. Starting from an examination of theories of collective action as a means of mobilising large groups of individuals, this book examines the current approaches governing class certification in competition damages cases, as well as in the general area of tort law, may no longer be totally justified. The book proposes a more ‘holistic’ approach to collective redress, involving access to civil justice, not only as a mechanism for public enforcement authorities and the involvement of representative organisations. It argues that this may succeed in delivering on goals of efficient adjudication and meaningful compensation of antitrust injuries without compromising on procedural fairness, and therefore that the EU Commission and the legislatures of many Member States may be more inclined to move away from their traditional views on these issues.

Pharmaceutical Innovation, Competition and Patent Law
A Trilateral Perspective

Edited by Josef Drexl, Max Planck Institute for Intellectual Property and Competition Law, Munich, Germany and Nari Lee, Hanken School of Economics, Helsinki, Finland

Public health, safety and access to reasonably priced medicine are common policy goals of pharmaceutical regulations. As innovation context and competitive structure change, industry actors dynamically challenge the balance between the incentive for protection and the policies. Contributors to this book including academics, judges and practitioners from Europe, US and Japan, explore pharmaceutical industry’s life cycle management strategies in the context of competition and patent laws, highlighting the difficulties in harmonization and coordination in this area of law and policy.

The International Handbook of Competition – Second Edition

Edited by Manfred Neumann, University Erlangen-Nürnberg and Jürgen Weigand, WHU Otto Beisheim School of Management, Vallendar, Germany

This indispensable Handbook examines the interface of competition policy, competition law and industrial economics. The book aims to further our understanding of how economic reasoning and legal expertise complement each other in defining the fundamental issues and principles in competition policy. In specially commissioned chapters the book provides a scholarly review of economic theory, empirical evidence and standards of legal evaluation with respect to monopolization of markets, exploitation of market power and mergers, among other issues.

Standardization under EU Competition Rules and US Antitrust Laws
The Rise and Limits of Self-Regulation

Björn Lundqvist, Copenhagen Business School, Denmark

Standardization under EU Competition Rules and US Antitrust Laws offers comparative insight into how technology standards and the standard setting process are regulated under United States antitrust law and European Union competition rules respectively. The current focus on single firms’ use of patents to exclude competition – for example, patent and FRAND ambush – is discussed, as well as the forms of collaboration making up the standardization process. Björn Lundqvist analyzes the standardization process, looking, for example, at the agreements and the conduct of firms prior to the enactment of a technology standard by a Standard Setting Organisation. Lundqvist asks whether these collaborations are more of an antitrust problem in themselves than the problems (such as ‘patent thicket’, ‘anticommon’, ‘royalty stacking’ and patent/FRAND ambush) they are designed to resolve.

Market Building through Antitrust
Long-term Contract Regulation in EU Electricity Markets

Adrien de Hauteclocque, Court of Justice of the European Union, Luxembourg

‘Antitrust is a sledgehammer to the creation of European-wide markets. How does it really work though? Take the case of power contracting. Look at the smart and fresh view from a promising scholar: Adrien de Hauteclocque. A must read.’

International Merger Policy
Applying Domestic Law to International Markets
Julie Clarke, Deakin University, Australia

International Merger Policy offers a compelling comparative assessment of domestic and regional merger laws and procedures. Identifying important areas of convergence and emerging best practice, it considers existing levels of international cooperation and identifies the key costs associated with transnational merger review before evaluating possible mechanisms by which they might be reduced.

Cartels, Competition and Public Procurement
Law and Economics Approaches to Bid Rigging
Stefan E. Weishaar, University of Groningen, The Netherlands

‘This volume is long overdue. Integrated legal and economic analysis of competition law is crucial given the nature of the sector. However to carry this off successfully, one either needs intensive editorial work to bring different teams together; or one has to rely on the few who master both economic and legal analysis to a tee. Stefan Weishaar’s analysis not only looks at a stubborn issue in competition law. He does so in three jurisdictions, in detailed yet clear fashion, with clear insight and ditto conclusions.’

The Criminal Law of Competition in the UK and in the US
Failure and Success
Mark Furse, University of Glasgow, UK

‘My overall impression of this book is that it is an excellent, well-researched overview of some of the most pertinent issues with antitrust criminalisation and of the operation of the criminal antitrust regimes in Ireland, the UK and the US. It provides fascinating insights into the practical workings of these regimes and, for the UK regime in particular, presents a detailed critical analysis of its failings to date. The thesis pursued by this monograph in its consideration of four different research questions is interesting, current, sophisticated and relevant. This monograph is essential reading for all those interested in antitrust criminalisation.’

Collective Dominance and Collusion
Parallelism in EU and US Competition Law
Marilena Filippeli, Free University of Bozen, Italy

‘This book treats one of the thorniest issues in contemporary antitrust theory: the role of tacit collusion among oligopolistic undertakings and the instruments to apply competition law against its harmful consequences. The author builds a very thorough parallel among US and European legal traditions, enforcement possibilities and concrete choices against tacit collusion. The result is an advanced and entertaining reading to be recommended both to lawyers and economists that study and practice antitrust.’

Intellectual Property, Human Rights and Competition
Access to Essential Innovation and Technology
Abbe E.L. Brown, University of Aberdeen, UK

‘Abbe Brown’s study starts from the assumption that IP right owners, particularly those of innovative technologies, dispose of a disproportionately strong legal position in relation to that of competitors and customers, which is detrimental to society at large. Brown investigates how the power of the IP right owners can be limited by applying existing human rights law and competition law. To that aim it is suggested to widen the legal landscape and to develop a more tripartite substantive approach to IP law, human rights law and competition law. Brown’s study offers a very welcome new contribution to the literature on the functioning of IP law, by stressing the joint role which competition law and human rights law can play in this respect.’

Announcing the new series

ELGAR ADVANCED INTRODUCTIONS

Elgar Advanced Introductions are stimulating and thoughtful introductions to major fields in the Social Sciences and Law, expertly written by the world’s leading scholars. Designed to be accessible yet rigorous, they offer concise and lucid surveys of the issues associated with discrete subject areas.

The aims of the series are two-fold; to pinpoint essential principles of a particular field, and to offer insights that stimulate critical thinking. By distilling the vast amount of information available on the subject area into a concise and meaningful form, the volumes serve as accessible introductions for undergraduate and graduate students coming to the subject for the first time. Importantly, they also develop well-informed, nuanced critiques of the field that will challenge and extend the understanding of advanced students, scholars and policy-makers.

Readership

Elgar Advanced Introductions will appeal to graduate students, advanced undergraduate students, policy-makers and non-specialist academics (though by crystallizing a field it is expected they will contribute to overall scholarly understanding).
