International Handbook of Urban Policy, Volume 3 NEW

Issues in the Developing World

Edited by H.S. Geyer, Stellenbosch University, South Africa

This important Handbook reveals that most urban growth takes place in the less developed world and much of it represents over-urbanization – that is, urbanization in which most migrants cannot effectively compete for employment, cannot find adequate shelter and do not have the means to feed themselves properly. Yet, compared to rural poverty, urban poverty is widely regarded as the lesser of the two evils.

Globalization and Inequality NEW

Edited by Branko Milanovic, World Bank Research Group, US

This volume brings together the most significant modern contributions to the literature on globalization and inequality. The editor's selection, set in context by an authoritative introduction, uses broad analyses and important case studies to illustrate the impact on levels of inequality of previous periods of globalization and of the current era of globalization. The collection further focuses on the issues of openness and inequality, and concludes with several benchmark papers that examine global levels of inequality. This timely book will be an invaluable resource for anyone concerned with this vital relationship, including teachers, doctoral students and researchers.

Handbook of Research Methods in Migration NEW

Edited by Carlos Vargas-Silva, University of Oxford, UK

The chapters of this interdisciplinary Handbook maintain an introductory level of discussion on migration research methods, and also provide readers with references necessary for those wishing to go deeper into the topic. Covering both qualitative and quantitative topics, the expert contributors explore fundamental issues of scientific logic, methodology and methods to practical applications of different techniques and approaches in migration research.

Urban Transport in the Developing World

A Handbook of Policy and Practice

Edited by

Harry T. Dimitriou,

University College

London, UK and

Ralph Gakenheimer,

Massachusetts Institute of Technology, US

The twenty thematic chapters in this Handbook provide a broad set of perspectives on the plight, possibilities and opportunities of urban transport in the developing world, set against the challenges of sustainable development. The contributors expertly set the international context of transport policy-making and planning for developing cities and present a critical review of recent developments that have taken place and which offer lessons for the future.

Good Governance in the 21st Century

Conflict, Institutional Change, and Development in the Era of Globalization

Edited by Joachim Ahrens, PFH Private

University of Applied Sciences Göttingen,

Germany, the late Rolf Caspers, formerly

EBS Universität für Wirtschaft und Recht i. Gr.,

Wiesbaden and Janina Weingarh, Kiel Institute for the World Economy, ASP, Germany

This book explores the interdependences of economic globalisation, political tensions, and national policymaking whilst analysing opportunities for governance reform at both national and international levels. It considers how governance mechanisms can be fashioned in order to both exploit the opportunities of globalization and cope with the numerous potential conflicts and risks.

Intellectual Property, Human Rights and Development

The Role of NGOs and Social Movements

Duncan Matthews, Queen

Mary, University of London,

UK

'One of the features of international negotiations has been the increasing participation of non-governmental organizations. In this important book, Duncan Matthews shows the nature and extent of NGO influence in the negotiations over intellectual property. Written with great clarity and drawing on interview data and case studies, the book will be valuable to both scholars and practitioners working in international negotiation.'

Does Economic Governance Matter?

Governance Institutions and Outcomes

Edited by Mehmet Ugur and David Sunderland,

University of Greenwich, UK

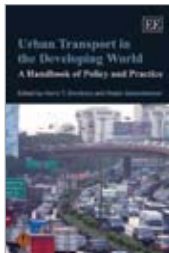

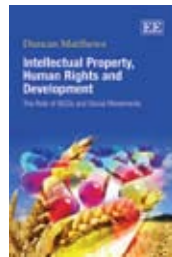

'This book is a welcome addition to the lively field of economic governance. The editors give a thoughtful review of ideas and landmarks in the literature and an organizing framework; the other chapters are a good mixture of theoretical, empirical, and case studies. The whole will significantly advance our understanding of institutions and economic performance.'

Urban Poverty in China

Fulong Wu, Chris Webster,
Cardiff University, UK,
Shenjing He, Sun Yat-Sen
University and Yuting Liu,
South China University of Technology, China

'Market reform has brought new forms of poverty to urban China, even while the standard of living of most urban residents has greatly improved. This research uses interviews with people in six cities to document their situation and to show how poverty is rooted in the failure of support systems in their neighborhoods and communities. It offers a stark evaluation of a system of inequalities that is only beginning to be addressed by state policy.'

What Makes Poor NEW Countries Poor?

Global Exchange and Poverty

Trade, Investment and Migration

Edited by Robert E.B. Lucas, Boston University, US, Lyn Squire, Past President, Global Development Network in New Delhi, India and T.N. Srinivasan, Stanford University, US

'The Global Development Network encourages policy-relevant research from developing countries. This volume assembles some results of this important work, focused here on the influence of policy on foreign trade, migration, and investment and of their influence in turn on growth and poverty in developing countries. Analysis of these influences on particular countries is an essential complement to the large-scale cross-country studies that have become so fashionable. Indeed, this detailed work casts doubt on the generality of some conventional wisdom, although not on the proposition that developing countries can gain significantly from engagement with the world economy. A most useful addition to the policy-relevant literature on developing countries.'

Why Poverty Persists

Poverty Dynamics in Asia and Africa

Edited by Bob Baulch, Chronic Poverty Research Centre

'At the beginning of the 2000–2010 decade, Bob Baulch (with John Hoddinott) was setting the micro-econometric agenda on poverty dynamics and chronic poverty and producing work that "non-economists" had to read if they wanted to conduct serious research on these issues. In this volume – through his analytical excellence, the pursuit and methodological rigour, extraordinary energy, and his ability to lead such a distinguished network of colleagues – Bob Baulch has set the research agenda on poverty dynamics and chronic poverty for the next ten years.'

Global Entrepreneurship and Development Index 2012 NEW

Zoltán J. Ács, George Mason University, US and László Szerb, University of Pécs, Hungary

'The Global Entrepreneurship and Development Index . . . focuses on high-growth companies. It tries to measure the ambition of entrepreneurs as well as the prevalence of start-ups. It presents its results in ways that are designed to capture the attention of policymakers. It produces a ranking of 71 countries (for all their faults, nothing makes a politician jump like a league table). It also identifies bottlenecks that prevent countries from doing better. The index concludes that development and enterprise are correlated.'

Japan's Great Stagnation NEW

Forging Ahead, Falling Behind

William Garside, Waseda University, Japan

On the face of it, Japan's economic experience from 1945 bears all the marks of a Shakespearean tragedy. The country, which stunned both itself and the Western world by its capacity within a few decades of wartime defeat to mount a serious challenge to American hegemony, appeared incapable of fully adjusting to shifting economic circumstance once the impulses of catch-up growth and the good fortune of an accommodating international environment faded, with doleful consequences.

Economic Development as a Learning Process NEW

Variation Across Sectoral Systems

Edited by Franco Malerba, Bocconi University, Italy and Richard R. Nelson, Columbia University, US

Until recently, economists studying economic development have tended to consider it a universal process, or focussed their attention on common aspects. This book originates from the growing recognition of significant sectoral differences in economic development and examines the catching-up process in five different economic sectors: pharmaceuticals, telecommunications equipment, semiconductors, software, and agro-food industries. Each of these sector studies explore the learning and catch-up processes in various developing countries, in order to identify both the common features, and those which differ significantly across sectors and nations. The authors pay particular attention to China, India, Brazil, Korea and Taiwan.

Handbook of Accounting and Development NEW

Edited by Trevor Hopper, University of Sussex, Mathew Tsamenyi, University of Birmingham, Shahzad Uddin, University of Essex and Danture Wickramasinghe, University of Hull, UK

This innovative and informative book brings together leading international researchers on accounting and development to review empirical evidence, issues, policies and practices both past and present. Their perspectives reflect the strong growth of research on the topic, as accounting is increasingly recognised as an important factor in development. The book draws commentary and analyses together to inform future research, practice and policy and raises awareness of the actual and potential role of accounting in formulating and executing development policy.

Managing Macroeconomic Policies for Sustainable Growth NEW

John Asafu-Adjaye and Renuka Mahadevan,
The University of Queensland, Australia

'These experienced economists use CGE modelling to analyse the consequences of significant contemporary economic and environmental policies in several Asia-Pacific countries and in Africa. This has not been done previously for several of the economies concerned. This path-breaking, economy-wide study assesses policies relating to agricultural development, trade and industrial development, energy, greenhouse gases and climate change. This readable book should appeal to a wide audience, including students, policy-makers and researchers.'

A Legal Theory of Economic Power NEW

Implications for Social and Economic Development

Calixto Salomão Filho, University of São Paulo Law School, Brazil and the Institut d'études Politiques (Science Po), Paris, France

This provocative book builds a strong case for why economic power cannot be considered a mere market phenomenon. Taking the forgotten realities and effects of these power structures into account, this comprehensive legal analysis persuasively argues the need for a new theory of economic power.

Exchange and Development

An Anatomy of Economic Transactions

Peter A. Cornelisse, Erasmus University, Rotterdam, The Netherlands and Erik Thorbecke, Cornell University, US

'The authors of this volume are spot on when they note that "the perspective alters drastically when it is realized that economic exchange as it occurs in the real world is a laborious and costly process with uncertain and imperfect outcomes". We all have a lot to learn from this highly original, thought provoking contribution to our understanding of the very core of economic and development thinking.'

The Regional Impact of National Policies NEW

The Case of Brazil

Edited by Werner Baer, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, US

Brazil is a country of continental proportions whose gross domestic product is unevenly distributed among its various regions. The impact of general domestic economic policies has often been perceived as not being regionally neutral, but as reinforcing the geographic concentration of economic activities. This detailed book examines the regional impact of such general policies as: industrialization, agricultural modernization, privatization, stabilization, science and technology, labor, and foreign direct investment.

Understanding Economic Development NEW PB

A Global Transition from Poverty to Prosperity?

Colin White, formerly of La Trobe University, Australia

'An invaluable survey of the literature on growth. Colin White argues persuasively and expertly that any attempt to solve the profound mystery of economic growth at the large scales of world history must move beyond the limited vision of neo-classical economic theory, and incorporate the narrative methods and perspectives of history as well. This is a superb overview and critique of contemporary attempts to explain economic growth, and a perceptive re-examination of the whole issue of growth in human history.'

The Costs of Economic Growth NEW

Edited by Peter A. Victor, York University, Canada

This book is a convenient and comprehensive collection of seminal papers on the costs of economic growth. The papers are grouped into six sections covering: the origins of the debate, the limits to growth, measurement, international and global dimensions, developing countries, and looking ahead. The original introduction, written by the editor, draws out the main themes that run through this extensive and thought provoking literature. This timely collection is intended for academics, students, researchers and anyone interested in this controversial topic.

Making Capitalism in Rural China NEW

Michael Webber, The University of Melbourne, Australia

This stimulating and challenging book explores the duplicitous nature of development in China. On the positive side, it brings longer and healthier lives; fewer children dead before they are five years old; more comfort and security from famine and disaster; more education; more communication; more travel; less war. But from another, darker perspective, development brings violence to some people – those who are in the way of the new things, those who cannot adapt to the new ways – and it threatens old knowledges, habits and societies as it disrupts old power structures.

The Asian Tsunami

Aid and Reconstruction after a Disaster

Sisira Jayasuriya, La Trobe University, Melbourne and Peter McCawley, Australian National University

'The death toll following the 2004 Asian tsunami – close to 230 000 people – was stunning. The devastation that the tsunami caused highlights the need to strengthen approaches to disaster risk reduction activities across Asia. Summarising hundreds of reports and articles about the disaster, this book underlines the fact that global disaster risks are highly concentrated in poor countries. And within those countries, it is usually poorer communities who are especially hard-hit when disasters strike. This is the first serious attempt at an overview of the impact for this major event and for anybody with an influence on disaster response policy in Asia, this book should be compulsory reading.'

An Economic History of Modern China

Joseph C.H. Chai, Research Grants Council, Hong Kong, China

'Joseph Chai places the recent phase of China's spectacular economic growth in its historical context in his well researched, interesting and accessible overview of the economic history of China. Because no similar up-to-date book is available in English, English readers will find this book particularly welcome. Valuable attributes of his exposition include analyses of various economic puzzles (for example, why did China, which was once the world's economic leader, falter, suffer economic retardation, fall behind Europe and begin its economic resurgence later than Japan) and his thoughtful considerations of the prospects for China's future economic growth. This book is highly recommended.'

Regional Integration and Economic Development in South Asia NEW

Edited by Sultan Hafeez Rahman, Asian Development Bank, Sridhar Khatri, South Asia Center for Policy Studies and Hans-Peter Brunner, Asian Development Bank, The Philippines

South Asian leaders have made it a priority to tackle key regional issues such as poverty, environment degradation, trade and investment barriers, and food insecurity, among others. Under the umbrella of the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation (SAARC), regional integration debates have focussed on these key issues. This book considers the leadership of SAARC and the interaction with civil society in the process of South Asian regional cooperation and integration, and discusses how the emerging urgency in the provision of regional public goods provides an excellent opportunity to add to the string of successes in South Asian regional integration.

Asia Beyond the Global Economic Crisis

The Transmission Mechanism of Financial Shocks

Edited by Satoshi Inomata, IDE-JETRO, Japan

The characteristic feature of the recent global economic crisis is the speed and extent of the shock transmission. The development of cross-national production networks in recent years has significantly deepened the economic interdependency between countries, and a shock that occurs in one region can be swiftly and extensively transmitted to the rest of the globe. The sudden contraction of world trade and output was a negative outcome of this intertwined global economic system. Based on the method known as international input-output analyses, this book provides a detailed examination of the mechanics of shock transmission by probing the labyrinth of complex supply networks among nations.

Systemic Vulnerability and Sustainable Economic Growth

Skills and Upgrading in Southeast Asia

Bryan K. Ritchie, Michigan State University, US

For many developing countries, economic growth is an elusive quest. Both economists and policymakers have long known that issues such as education, investment and infrastructure are necessary ingredients for development and yet only a very small number of countries seem to be able to come up with the right mix of these ingredients. Bryan Ritchie demonstrates how political relationships among government, business, academic and labor leaders create different incentives for economic actors to make key decisions to promote economic upgrading and sustainable development.

Decentralization in Developing Countries

Global Perspectives on the Obstacles to Fiscal Devolution

Edited by
Jorge Martinez-Vazquez,
Georgia State University, US
and François Vaillancourt,
Université de Montréal, Canada

'Some think that decentralization has not gone "far enough" to be considered successful; others argue that it has already "failed". As the studies of decentralization in 15 developing countries in this volume clearly show, every case is different, and persuasive generalizations are hard to find. Fortunately, the introductory chapter usefully pulls this diverse reality together to highlight some key obstacles to successful decentralization and to suggest some approaches that might – provided that those in power are sufficiently supportive – lead to better outcomes in the future.'

Regional Integration, Economic Development and Global Governance

Edited by Ulrich Volz,
German Development
Institute, Bonn, Germany

'This book explores a central issue of the world economy today: the role of regional integration for economic development and global governance. The importance of this issue comes from the fact that the globalisation process that we have been experiencing in recent decades is also a process of open regionalism. . . . To what extent does this process contribute to development? The reader will find many interesting answers to this question in the book, [which] is an outstanding contribution to this debate. I welcome its publication and look forward to its influence on global debates on the relations between regional integration, development and global governance.'

Debt Management for NEW PB Development

Protection of the Poor and the Millennium Development Goals

Kunibert Raffer, University of Vienna, Austria

'The problem of the debt burden and pleas for debt relief have been compared to the girl who killed both her parents and then pleaded for mercy on the grounds that she was an orphan. (It has been called the classic definition of chutzpah.) Kunibert Raffer has more sympathy for the debtors. He discusses the international debt problem in a profound way and his proposal, the Raffer proposal, is ingenious, practical and wise.'

Transportation and Economic Development Challenges

Edited by Kenneth Button, George Mason University, US and Aura Reggiani, University of Bologna, Italy

Recent years have seen considerable changes in the technology of transportation with the development of high-speed rail networks, more fuel-efficient automobiles and aircraft, and the widespread adoption of informatics in disciplines such as traffic management and supply chain logistics. The contributions to this volume assess transportation interactions with employment and income, examine some of the policies that have been deployed to maximize the economic and social impacts of transportation provision at the local and regional levels and analyze how advances in transportation technologies have, and will, impact future development.

NECTAR Series on Transportation and Communications Networks Research

Private Sector and Enterprise Development

Fostering Growth in the Middle East and North Africa

Lois Stevenson, International Development Research Centre, Cairo, Egypt

'Stevenson's book provides a thorough review for a diverse and complex region with a practical guide for policy makers to respond to the high unemployment and low productivity challenges facing the 12 countries covered in the analysis. Moreover, Stevenson advocates how to encourage a missing entrepreneurial spirit that is crucial to expand the private sector role. Written in a smooth style, it is a must read for academics, students and policy makers to understand the dynamics of the private-public sector relations. It is also useful to donor communities to help set their priorities in a regional context.'

Cost–Benefit Analysis and Environmental Policy

Nick Hanley, University of Stirling, UK and
Edward B. Barbier, University of Wyoming, US

'This is an excellent text that could be used in specialist academic courses in environmental and natural resource economics, ecological economics and cost–benefit analysis, as well as in interdisciplinary courses in public policy, planning and environmental management.'

– David James, Australasian Journal of Environmental Management

The textbook is aimed at students on inter-disciplinary courses as well as those studying environmental economics, welfare economics and public policy. It will also be of interest to people in the policy community, NGOs and consultancy sectors.

Modern Cost–Benefit Analysis of Hydropower Conflicts

Edited by Per-Olov Johansson, Stockholm School of Economics, SLU and Umeå University and Bengt Kriström, SLU and Umeå University, Sweden

This book sheds light on the ways in which modern tools of welfare economics can be used to assess the benefits and costs of resource conflicts involving hydropower. Key methodological issues are highlighted, ranging from the intersection between cost–benefit analysis and behavioral economics, to the value of load balancing services provided by hydropower. The inclusion of insights from expert contributors from both sides of the Atlantic brings a unique and interesting range of viewpoints to the work.

States, Banks and Crisis NEW

Emerging Finance Capitalism in Mexico and Turkey

Thomas Marois, University of London, UK

Thomas Marois' groundbreaking interpretation of banking and development in Mexico and Turkey builds on a Marxian-inspired framework premised on understanding states and banks as social relationships alongside crisis and labor as vital to finance today. The book's rich historical and empirical content reveals definite institutionalized relationships of power that mainstream political economists often miss. While leading to a timely analysis of the impact of the Great Recession on Mexico and Turkey, the major contribution of States, Banks and Crisis is in its account of emerging finance capitalism. This is defined as the current phase of accumulation wherein the interests of financial capital are fused in the state apparatus as the institutionalized priorities and overarching social logic guiding the actions of state managers and government elites, often to the detriment of labor.

Alternatives

Edited by Gerald A. Epstein, University of Massachusetts-Amherst, US and
A. Erinc Yeldan, Bilkent University, Ankara,
Turkey and Executive Committee of the International Development Economics Associates,
New Delhi, India

'Inflation targeting (IT) has become the sacred cow of central banking. But its suitability to developing nations remains contested. The contributors to this volume perform the valuable service of sketching out plausible, more development-friendly alternatives. They are to be commended in particular for avoiding a one-size-fits-all approach and paying close attention to the needs of specific countries. Their proposals range from relatively minor tinkering in IT to comprehensive overhaul. A common theme is the central role of the real exchange rate, which the central banks ignore at their economies' peril.'

The Financial Crisis and Developing Countries

A Global Multidisciplinary Perspective

Edited by Peter A.G. van Bergeijk, Erasmus
University and Utrecht University, Arjan de Haan
and Rolph van der Hoeven, Erasmus University,
The Hague, The Netherlands

The Financial Crisis and Developing Countries discusses and analyses regional and country specific impacts of the financial crisis in emerging markets and developing countries, covering all continents. Using heterodox and mainstream methodologies, the book develops a multidisciplinary perspective on the crisis phenomenon as it examines how the crisis changes concepts of development, critically discusses the mainstream approach, analyses (global) governance issues (including the G20) and shows the actual impact for the poor and crisis vulnerable.

Rethinking Trade and Commercial Policy Theories

Development Perspectives

P. Sai-wing Ho, University of Denver, US

Mainstream trade and commercial policy theories – with lineage traced back to Smith, Ricardo, Torrens, and Mill – have often trivialised the process of development as static resource allocation. Peter Sai-wing Ho re-interprets the works of these classical economists and those of the so-called ‘protectionists’ – Hamilton, List, Manólesco, Prebisch, Myrdal, and Singer – to offer an alternative framework that considers the role of trade, foreign investment, and technology in engendering uneven development. The author reveals that these ‘protectionists’ actually offered sophisticated prescriptions involving non-trade instruments, interweaving import-substitution with export-promotion, and emphasizing indigenous technological-capability cultivation.

Conflict, Chaos and Confusion

The Crisis in the International Trading System

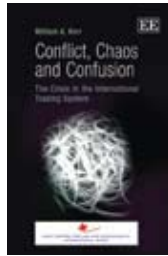

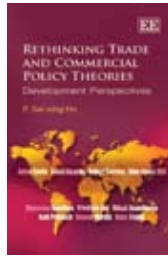

William A. Kerr, University of Saskatchewan, Canada

‘The Estey Centre Journal of International Law and Trade Policy has become required reading among trade policy specialists, not least for Bill Kerr’s “Editor’s Pages” essay in each volume. Kerr has the ability in a dozen pages to engage, inform and entertain the reader with his careful scholarship, interesting choice of topic and highly-readable style. Kerr sets the tone for the volume and whets the appetite for the other articles. Over the ten years of the Estey Journal’s life Kerr’s pages have drawn our attention to a range of trade-law topics from the golf-club-like voting rules of the WTO to the delights of sipping incorrectly-labeled port. The decision to bring these twenty short papers together in a volume was inspired. Students and teachers will benefit from the convenience of the collection as source material for classes on trade law and policy. But above all, scholars in the fascinating area of the interplay of economics and law in multilateral trade institutions will have the wisdom of Bill Kerr readily to hand.’

Input Trade and Production Networks in East Asia

Edited by Daisuke Hiratsuka and Yoko Uchida, JETRO, Japan

‘Spatial fragmentation of production is linked with two great waves of unbundling. The first one was a century and a half ago when the spatial location of production of goods was separated from their consumption. We live in the age of a second unbundling where certain operations within the same factory can be fragmented and performed elsewhere. There is trade in certain tasks and components which was made possible by cheaper and better communication and transport. This book considers production networks in East Asia, which is and will continue to be the most dynamic economic region in the decades to come.’

The Making of International Trade Policy

NGOs, Agenda-Setting and the WTO

Hannah Murphy, University of Tasmania, Australia

‘Hannah Murphy provides a refreshingly realistic account of NGO influence in international trade policy. Carefully argued and persuasive, her book lays out the possibilities and limits of advocacy. Throwing cold water on overheated claims about NGO power to democratize the WTO, Murphy emphasizes how WTO rules shape NGO activities. As she deftly shows, this leaves room for activists to help set the WTO agenda even as they often legitimate, rather than challenge, state interests.’

Research Handbook on the Protection of Intellectual Property under WTO Rules

Intellectual Property in the WTO Volume I

Edited by Carlos M. Correa, University of Buenos Aires, Argentina

'TRIPs is the only positive integration type of agreement in the WTO. Scholars have legitimately in my view, questioned its inclusion in the WTO since the protection of IP rights is no more a trade issue than many other similar issues. This is the first time that a set of well-known experts has dealt in a comprehensive manner with the vast array of issues regarding the coming-into-being, the functioning and the perspectives of the TRIPs regime under the aegis of the WTO. These two volumes will provide very useful guidance to students and policymakers alike dealing with protection of IP rights and international trade.'

Denmark and Sciences-Po, Paris, France,
K.J. Joseph, Centre for Development Studies,
India, Cristina Chaminade, Lund University,
Sweden and Jan Vang, Aalborg University,

Knowledge Transfer and Technology Diffusion

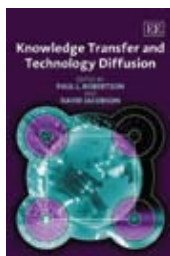

Edited by

Paul L. Robertson,
University of Tasmania,
Australia and
David Jacobson, Dublin
City University, Ireland

This important book is about the origins and diffusion of innovation, in theory and in practice. The practice draws on a variety of industries, from electronics to eyewear, from furniture to mechatronics, in a range of economies including Europe, the USA and China.

The eminent contributors investigate how the latest technologies diffuse through the economy, helping to reinvigorate seemingly old and stagnant industries in the process. Examples drawn from Asia and Europe show how countries like China and India are increasingly able to catch up with, or even surpass, industrialized nations in Europe and North America, in some cases by becoming technological pioneers. The book also examines the effects of new information and communications technologies on regional economies, especially in Western Europe. The themes and findings are summarized and evaluated in an extensive introductory chapter.

Biotechnology and Innovation Systems NEW

The Role of Public Policy

Edited by Bo Göransson and Carl Magnus Pålsson, Lund University, Sweden

This book explores how policies targeting public research institutions, such as universities, contribute to the appropriation of biotechnology through national innovation systems.

Around the world, biotechnology has become a driving force for dramatic change in systems and policies intended to spur innovation. The leading contributors expertly construct a detailed picture of policy approaches that support biotechnology and how such approaches work under different economic and social conditions. They also provide an insight into the role of universities in this process.

The Changing Geography of Wine Production

Edited by Elisa Giuliani, University of Pisa, Italy and SPRU, University of Sussex, UK, Andrea Morrison, Utrecht University, The Netherlands and KITEs-Bocconi University, Italy and Roberta Rabellotti, Università del Piemonte Orientale, Italy

'This book overturns the old paradigm ideas about natural-resource-based activities. It sheds light on the new opportunities for technological dynamism and catching-up by using science to open novel directions in traditional sectors. It should become a classic in what I expect will be a very important academic debate and a new trend in development policy.'

Technology Entrepreneurs in the Emerging Economies NEW

The New Shape of Global Innovation

Edited by Leonard H. Lynn, Case Western Reserve University and Harold Salzman, Urban Institute, US

For the first time technology entrepreneurs in emerging economies are joining the global innovation system. As US, European and Japanese multinationals locate higher levels of technology development work in the emerging economies, 'bottom up' pull factors expand the level of offshore R&D capacity. This book discusses how scientists and engineers in India, China, Mexico and Central Europe demand more challenging work and how they have contributed important new perspectives and original innovations. They have become important links in global technology value chains as technology entrepreneurs themselves and have helped to develop local technology clusters in these countries. The contributors explore these processes in the leading emerging areas and analyze the new shape of the global innovation system.

Innovation and Economic Development

The Impact of Information and Communication Technologies in Latin America

Edited by Mario Cimoli, Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC), Chile and University of Venice, Italy, André A. Hofman and Nanno Mulder, ECLAC, Chile

Information and communication technologies (ICT) are spreading fast across Latin America and the Caribbean. This trend has brought about important economic and social changes, which have largely gone unmeasured until recently. Here, analysts from the United Nations Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean along with other distinguished scholars in the field of ICT, growth and productivity provide theoretical and empirical insights to the debate on the role of ICT in economic development.

Migration and the Globalisation of Health Care

The Health Worker Exodus?

John Connell, University of Sydney, Australia

The international migration of health workers has been described by Nelson Mandela as the 'poaching' of desperately needed skills from under-privileged regions. This book examines the controversial recent history of skilled migration, and explores the economic and cultural rationale behind this rise of a complex global market in qualified migrants and its multifaceted outcomes.

Building National and Regional Innovation Systems

Institutions for Economic Development

Jorge Niosi, Université du Québec à Montreal, Canada

'The era of the Washington consensus, where the basic advice to developing countries was simply to let markets emerge and not to interfere with their operations, now is gone, at least for the present. The challenge now is to articulate a broad development strategy that really works. Over the last decade a group of economists has been putting together a body of knowledge and analysis oriented to helping poor countries build the economic, organizational, technological, and scientific capabilities that they need in order to develop. Jorge Niosi is an important member of that group. And this book provides an excellent discussion of the emerging perspective on development strategy.'

Patent Rights in Pharmaceuticals in Developing Countries

Major Challenges for the Future

Jakkrit Kuanpoth, University of Wollongong, Australia

'Dr Kuanpoth's book is an erudite and constructive contribution to the debate on patents and public health. The book's focus on India and Thailand, both of which have sought actively to balance patent rights with public health goals, provides some valuable findings that should lead to more sensitive intellectual property policymaking in the developing and developed worlds.'

Edited by Kenneth C. Shadlen, London School of Economics and Political Science, UK, Samira Guennif, Université Paris 13, France, Alenka Guzmán, Autonomous Metropolitan University-Iztapalapa, Mexico and N. Lalitha, Gujarat Institute of Development Research, India

'This impressive collection offers fascinating new perspectives on the impact of pharmaceutical patents on access to medicines in developing countries. The volume's editors have put together an important book that sets out clearly the challenges to public health in a wide range of national contexts. The book will be a valuable text for all scholars and decision-makers interested in the global politics of intellectual property rights and public health.'

Setting Priorities for HIV/AIDS Interventions

A Cost-Benefit Approach

Robert J. Brent, Fordham University, US

'Professor Brent's book is a superlative addition to the HIV/AIDS policy literature. Both non-specialists and specialists in policy evaluation will benefit from the lucid exposition of cost-benefit analysis (CBA) methods applied to the most critical and far-reaching problem that challenges social institutions and individual behavior. Essentially, Professor Brent has taken his vast experience in cost-benefit analysis, and on the ground African research, to apply CBA in a compelling and insightful manner. This book re-examines HIV/AIDS policy in Sub-Saharan countries where the devastation is an infection tsunami. . . Finding what actually works may be difficult, but Professor Brent argues persuasively that using a CBA framework is the best approach.'

Genetic Resources and Traditional Knowledge NEW

Case Studies and Conflicting Interests

Edited by Tania Bubela, University of Alberta, Canada and E. Richard Gold, McGill University

This fascinating study describes efforts to define and protect traditional knowledge and the associated issues of access to genetic resources, from the negotiation of the Convention on Biological Diversity through to The Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples and the Nagoya Protocol. Because traditional knowledge was understood in early negotiations to be subject to a property rights framework, these often became bogged down due to differing views on the rights involved. New models, developed around the notion of distributive justice and self-determination, are now gaining favor. The book suggests – through a discussion of theory and contemporary case studies from Brazil, India, Kenya and Canada – that a focus on distributive justice best advances the interests of indigenous peoples while also fostering scientific innovation in both developed and developing countries.

Globalisation, Agriculture and Development

Perspectives from the Asia-Pacific

Edited by Matthew Tonts and M.A.B. Siddique,
The University of Western Australia

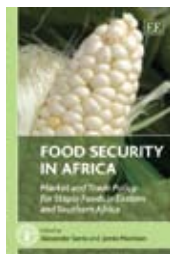

'This volume is both opportune and important. The issue of the links between globalization, agriculture and development need urgently to be emphasised in a world economy transfixed by issues of energy, industry and finance, the problems of the triad states, and the rise of the BRICs. The chapters in this volume begin this task through studies of agricultural change in Asia-Pacific countries, including Australia, New Zealand, the ASEAN nations, India and China. They show the uneven impacts of liberalization, contracting, and modernization that bring social change in their wake.'

Intellectual Property, Agriculture and Global Food Security

The Privatization of Crop Diversity

Claudio Chiarolla, Institut du développement durable et des relations internationales (Iddri) and Sciences Po. Paris, France

'This thoughtful book raises important issues about ownership of agricultural resources, the environment and food security. Claudio Chiarolla has written an important book that challenges traditional notions of plant genetic resources and agricultural research. The author's detailed and thorough approach ensures that the book will make a valuable contribution to the debate about sustainable agricultural development and it is highly recommended to anyone interested in intellectual property rights and sustainable agriculture.'

Improving Irrigation in Asia

Sustainable Performance of an Innovative Intervention in Nepal

Elinor Ostrom, Indiana University, US,
Wai Fung Lam, The University of Hong Kong, Prachanda Pradhan, Farmer Managed Irrigation Systems Promotion Trust, Nepal and Ganesh P. Shivakoti, Asian Institute of Technology, Thailand

'Governance of irrigation systems is complex, needing social, technical and financial actions that support farming. Few people have as much knowledge of self-governing irrigation systems as these authors, and few countries have as many of these systems as Nepal. Lessons from these small irrigation systems can be adapted to much larger units, and to other kinds of activity. External assistance on a modest scale could generate practical benefit, by encouraging self-reliance in communities.'

– Charles Abernethy, International Irrigation Management Institute, Colombo (1987–94) and Asian Institute of Technology, Thailand (1996–99)

Improving Irrigation in Asia is based on a longitudinal study over two decades on innovative intervention for sustained performance of irrigation systems.

Governance by Evaluation NEW for Sustainable Development

Institutional Capacities and Learning

Edited by Michal Sedlacko and André Martinuzzi, Vienna University of Economics and Business (WU Wien), Vienna,
Austria

This new volume draws lessons from how evaluation studies and evaluation systems forward the agendas of sustainable development and good governance by opening up decision-making processes to stakeholders, supporting evidence-based, coherent and transparent decision making, integrating concerns of the three domains of sustainable development into decision making and supporting learning and capacity building. It also assesses how political-administrative realities affect the design and use of evaluation studies as well as the institutionalization of monitoring and evaluation systems. The book reviews recent European experience with evaluation at the EU, national, regional and local levels and will appeal to researchers specializing in regional, political and sustainability sciences and practitioners in the area of policy/program evaluation and sustainable development.

Land Use Policies for NEW Sustainable Development

Exploring Integrated Assessment
Approaches

Edited by Desmond McNeill, Ingrid Nesheim,
University of Oslo, Norway and Floor Brouwer,
LEI (Wageningen University and Research Centre), The Hague, The Netherlands

The urgency to enhance sustainable development in developing countries has never been greater: poverty levels are growing, land conversions are uncontrolled, and loss of biodiversity through land use change is high. This important and timely book highlights the need for integrated assessment tools for countries in the South, considering the long-term impacts of decisions taken today. The challenge of land use changes in response to changes in the policy environment – macro policy, agricultural and forest policy, environmental policy – is explored with a focus on developing countries. Detailed case studies encompassing seven developing countries in Africa, Asia and Latin America are then presented via a common framework of analysis.

Twenty-First Century Macroeconomics

Responding to the Climate Challenge

Edited by Jonathan M. Harris and
Neva R. Goodwin, Tufts University, US

The authors and editors of this book challenge traditional assumptions about economic growth, and develop the elements of a reoriented macroeconomics that takes account both of environmental impacts and social equity. Policies including carbon trading, revenue recycling, and reorientation of private and social investment are analyzed, providing insight into new paths for economic development with flat or negative carbon emissions. These issues will be crucial to macroeconomic and development policies in the twenty-first century.

Sustainable Development, NEW Evaluation and Policy Making

Theory, Practise and Quality Assurance

Edited by Frieder Rubik, Institute for Ecological Economy Research (IÖW) and Anneke von Raggamby, Ecologic Institute, Germany

This accessible book is simply structured according to the policy-cycle, highlighting different functions that evaluation can play in its phases. Analyzing the relationships between sustainability and assessment, the perception of sustainability problems are presented as well as exploring the role of evaluation and assessment studies during policy formulation and policy implementation. Policy reformulation is also explored including monitoring and quality improvement schemes. The volume concludes by addressing the quality of evaluations, and the impact this has.

Climate Change Policies

Global Challenges and Future Prospects

Edited by
Emilio Cerdá, Complutense University, Spain and Xavier Labandeira, University of Vigo, Spain

Climate Change Policies sheds light on the foundations, design and effects of climate change policies. Written by leading international experts in the field, this book deals with the various economic effects from climate change policies introduced at national and international levels. It also expertly describes actual applications of climate change policies in the main emitting countries. This insightful study includes chapters on public policies and climate change impacts, adaptation, mitigation, effects on competitiveness, new technologies, distributional concerns, and the international dimension.

Payments for Environmental Services, Forest Conservation and Climate Change

Livelihoods in the REDD?

Edited by Luca Tacconi, Sango Mahanty and Helen Suich, Australian National University

'Everybody talks about payments for environmental services nowadays, yet we still chronically lack good case studies systematically analyzing the experiences out there. This book fills an important gap by bringing together in-depth analyses of carbon-focused PES and PES-like schemes from three tropical continents. Using a sustainable livelihoods approach, the book convincingly confirms our sound intuition: poor farmers voluntarily participating in PES initiatives worldwide will usually become better off. As forest and climate change initiatives continue to blossom, this irrefutable insight will become valuable.'

Weak versus Strong Sustainability

Exploring the Limits of Two Opposing Paradigms, Third Edition

Eric Neumayer, London School of Economics and Political Science, UK

This insightful book explores the limits of the two opposing paradigms of sustainability in an accessible way. It examines the availability of natural resources for the production of consumption goods and services, and the environmental consequences of economic growth. The critical forms of natural capital in need of preservation given risk, uncertainty and ignorance about the future are also examined. The author provides a critical discussion of measures of sustainability. As indicators of weak sustainability, he analyses Genuine Savings and the Index of Sustainable Economic Welfare, also known as the Genuine Progress Indicator. Indicators of strong sustainability covered include ecological footprints, material flows, sustainability gaps and other measures, which combine the setting of environmental standards with monetary valuation.

Scarcity, Entitlements and the Economics of Water in Developing Countries

P.B. Anand, University of Bradford, UK

'In this creative study Anand applies environmental economic tools and concepts to analyze water issues in developing countries. . . The author carefully integrates the poverty, inequality, and development issues of water; and he meticulously discusses the intertwined rivalrous and excludable public good characteristics of water supply. . . Highly recommended.'
