The Elgar <sup>PB</sup> Companion to Social Economics

Edited by John B. Davis,
University of Amsterdam,
The Netherlands and Marquette University, US and
Wilfred Dolfsma, University of Groningen, The Netherlands

'Davis and Dolfsma have edited a volume of 36 essays that provides a first-rate introduction to the recent cutting-edge scholarship in social economics. . . the volume provides an impressive and broad array of articles covering traditional social economic topics. . . Each essay is an excellent point of entry into social economic thought. This volume will be of great interest to economists writing in the heterodox tradition and/or to mainstream economists seeking a richer analysis of socioeconomic relationships. Highly recommended.'

The Economics of <sup>NEW</sup> Organisation and Bureaucracy

Edited by Peter M. Jackson, University of Leicester, UK

This authoritative and in-depth collection presents seminal papers from leading academics in the field of organisation and bureaucracy. It encompasses sections on organisational boundaries, neo-Schumpeterian theories, hierarchy and international organisation, organisational culture and behaviour, power politics and authority as well as organisational institutions and practices. Professor Jackson has chosen works which have shaped the views of how the economics of organisation and bureaucracy are viewed today and has included papers from conflicting ends of the spectrum to illustrate the fluid and evolving nature of the subject. This indispensable volume, with an original introduction by the editor, will be of immense value to students, scholars and practitioners interested in this topical and relevant field.

International Handbook of Public Management Reform

Edited by Shaun Goldfinch,
Nottingham University Business
School, UK and Joe L. Wallis,
American University of Sharjah,
Sharjah, United Arab Emirates

'This volume presents a compelling package for anyone interested in public sector reform. It effectively combines a wide range of well-researched reviews of national experiences with state-of-the-art thematic chapters in key reform areas such as IT governance, public sector leadership and accountability. The result is a robust, insightful and sometimes sobering series of accounts of the promises and pitfalls of efforts to reform the institutions and practices of public governance around the world. A must-read.'

Social Policy in an Ageing Society

Age and Health in Singapore

David Reisman, Nanyang
Technological University,
Singapore and University of Surrey, UK

Around half the world's population live in countries where the fertility rate is far below the replacement rate and where life expectancy is increasing dramatically. Using Singapore as a case study, Social Policy in an Ageing Society explores what might happen in a dynamic and prosperous society when falling births, longer life expectancy and rising expectations put disproportionate pressure on scarce resources that have alternative uses.

Complexity, Institutions NEW and Public Policy

Agile Decision-making in a Turbulent World

Graham Room, University of Bath, UK

'I was excited by the book and the light it threw on many current policy issues. I was immensely impressed by the sheer scope and bravado of what I read. It attempts to integrate complexity science with evolutionary theory and institutionalism. It engages with post-Darwinian theory but superimposes on this an equal concern with power and politics. His distinction between habitual action and agile action is enlightening. Graham Room also tackles the economic crisis and global turbulence, and adds a postscript on tools for policymakers. The book is ambitious and complex but surprisingly lucid and well written.'

– Ian Gough, London School of Economics, UK

'Theoretical work on complex phenomena is beginning to have a major impact on several disciplines. Graham Room gives a clear summary of many of these insights and shows how this work can help guide public policy.'

– Geoffrey M. Hodgson, University of Hertfordshire, UK

'I think this is a very important book. Very few people in the social sciences write books on this topic and really do justice to complexity theory. Professor Room gives a very detailed, accurate and accessible review of complexity theory as it applies to social policy.'

The Economics of NEW Evaluation in Public Programs

Edited by Albert N. Link, University of North Carolina at Greensboro, US and Max Planck Institute on Entrepreneurship, Growth and Public Policy, Jena, Germany and John T. Scott, Dartmouth College, US

This research collection illustrates the wide range of methodologies and methods available for the evaluation of public programs. All these methods address the benefits of the programs and most compare the benefits to costs, but the types of benefits and their measures vary greatly across the studies and across the different types of public programs. The key articles presented here explore these different approaches and offer many examples of actual evaluations of public programs across different public policy settings.

Population Ageing, Pensions and Growth

Intertemporal Trade-offs and Consumption Planning

John Creedy, University of Melbourne and Ross Guest, Griffith University, Australia

Many areas of economics require the evaluation of time streams of costs and benefits. Societies face long-term phenomena affecting costs and benefits far into the future, such as demographic change and climate change. These present challenges for policymakers in planning inter-temporal consumption paths that balance the goals of efficiency and equity. An exploration of these issues, with respect to population ageing in particular, is the primary motivation for this book. This book evaluates these problems with a particular focus on the role of concepts, assumptions and value judgments.

Population Aging and the Generational Economy NEW

A Global Perspective

Edited by Ronald Lee, University of California, Berkeley, US and Andrew Mason, University of Hawaii at Manoa and East-West Center, Hawaii, US

'Population Aging and the Generational Economy provides an encompassing account of what we know about population aging and the impact that this process will have on our economies. It does not confine itself to the advanced industrial countries, where aging has already been largely studied, but adopts a truly global perspective. I am sure it will become a key reference for researchers, students and those involved in policymaking in areas that are affected by population aging.'

RESEARCH COLLECTION

Effective Federalism and Local Finance

Edited by Ehtisham Ahmad, University of Bonn, Germany and London School of Economics, UK and Giorgio Brosio, University of Turin, Italy

Fiscal federalism has been the subject of much scholarly debate over the years. These volumes successfully bring together seminal articles from the past fifty years to demonstrate how the focus has evolved from 'first generation' to 'second generation' theories of intergovernmental relations. The editors enhance the collection with detailed analyses of how competition affects relations between varying levels of government, and examine the hypotheses underlying the theory of fiscal federalism. This set of authoritative papers will be an indispensable reference source for scholars and practitioners in this field.

State and Local Retirement Plans in the United States

Robert L. Clark, Lee A. Craig, North Carolina State University and John Sabelhaus, University of Maryland, College Park, US

State and Local Retirement Plans in the United States explains how economic and political events have shaped the development of pension plans in the last century, and it argues that changes in the structure and generosity of these plans will continue to shape policy and funding in the future. It also brings to bear a new rationale to the policies behind public sector pension plans. The authors use the history of how early public pension plans were established, how they matured and how they have grown in generosity to analyse what changes may be expected in years to come. Unique in its scope, this comprehensive history of the development of public sector pension plans in the United States during the twentieth century expands upon current ideas relating to the changing economic environment, the passage and evolution of social security, and the expansion of the public sector.

Decentralization in Developing Countries

Global Perspectives on the Obstacles to Fiscal Devolution

Edited by

Jorge Martinez-Vazquez, Georgia State University, US and François Vaillancourt, Université de Montréal, Canada

'Some think that decentralization has not gone "far enough" to be considered successful; others argue that it has already "failed". As the studies of decentralization in 15 developing countries in this volume clearly show, every case is different, and persuasive generalizations are hard to find. Fortunately, the introductory chapter usefully pulls this diverse reality together to highlight some key obstacles to successful decentralization and to suggest some approaches that might – provided that those in power are sufficiently supportive – lead to better outcomes in the future.'

Modelling the Composition of Government Expenditure NEW

John Creedy, Victoria University of Wellington and New Zealand Treasury and Solmaz Moslehi, Monash University, Australia

The composition of government expenditure varies considerably across countries. The aim of this book is to explore the choice of expenditure using a range of modelling approaches.

The models allow for different economic environments, involving the types of expenditure considered, the time period of analysis and the behaviour of individuals. The composition of expenditure is examined using majority voting and public finance frameworks, where the latter involves maximisation of a social welfare function involving a trade-off between equity and efficiency. Special attention is given to expenditure on transfer payments, public goods and education. Empirical analyses are also carried out, using data for a wide range of countries, where potential orders of magnitude of various components of the models are obtained. The models help in considering important factors and the inter-relationships involved. In particular, a synthesis is provided which allows special consideration of the role of basic inequality in influencing expenditure patterns.

Public Investment, Growth and Fiscal Constraints

Challenges for the EU New Member States

Edited by Massimo Florio, Università di Milano, Italy

This book makes a unique contribution in advancing understanding of the fiscal condition and growth potential of the New Member States of the European Union. It provides new data, policy evaluation, and offers national and regional perspectives. The core research questions are the effect of public investment in the context of macroeconomic disequilibrium and how it is possible to finance capital accumulation in the present and future conditions of mounting public sector debt.

Does Decentralization Enhance Service Delivery and Poverty Reduction?

Edited by Ehtisham Ahmad, University of Bonn, Germany and London School of Economics, UK and Giorgio Brosio, University of Turin, Italy

Does decentralization enhance service delivery and poverty reduction? Drawing on cutting edge research, expert contributors address this fundamental question facing policy-makers in developing as well as advanced countries. This timely book builds upon insights on the recent developments in the intergovernmental literature first outlined in the Handbook of Fiscal Federalism (see page 7). New empirical evidence from across the globe is presented: policy-oriented chapters evaluate fiscal federalism with an emphasis on the effectiveness of decentralized service delivery, the decentralization process in different parts of the world is appraised, and specially commissioned research focuses on the political economy process and the outcomes of the decentralization process. The role of international agencies, as explicit donors, is examined in several chapters.

Modelling Corporation Tax Revenue

John Creedy, University of Melbourne, Australia and Norman Gemmill, The Treasury, New Zealand

'Fiscal crises around the world imply that revenue forecasting is ever more important, while globalisation implies that estimating corporate tax revenues is ever more difficult. This book could thus not be more timely, as Creedy and Gemmill provide an expert analysis of both the technical issues and practical details that must be addressed in modelling corporation tax revenues. It will be invaluable to anyone involved in revenue forecasting – or anyone who wants to know what is involved in revenue forecasting.'

The Public Sector in Japan

Past Developments
and Future Prospects

Takero Doi, Keio University and Toshihiro Ithori, University of Tokyo, Japan

This book presents a comprehensive, theory-based analysis of Japan's public sector. Particular emphasis is directed at developing tools that can be applied to theoretically and empirically clarify essential economic concerns in Japan's public sector. These include macroeconomic incidence of fiscal decentralisation, dependence on government bonds for covering financial deficits, and social security reform. In analysing Japan's underperforming public sector, the authors develop and recommend policy solutions aimed at achieving Japan's growth potential, improving the quality of the public sector, and strengthening the sector's contribution to the Japanese economy.

The Political Economy of Financing Scottish Government

Considering a New Constitutional Settlement for Scotland

C. Paul Hallwood, University of Connecticut, US and Ronald MacDonald, University of Glasgow, UK

Can the UK survive widespread dissatisfaction in both Scotland and England with the financing of public spending by Scotland's parliament? This timely book explains how fiscal autonomy could raise economic growth and efficiency in Scotland – to the benefit of both Scotland and the rest of the United Kingdom. The authors discuss how other reform proposals – which amount to cutting Scotland's block grant – would fail as they would not be seen in Scotland as legitimate. They conclude that fiscal autonomy would be accepted as it reduces Scotland's democratic deficit in public spending, and would go a long way toward reducing vertical and horizontal imbalances in the UK.

Personal Provision of Retirement Income

Meeting the Needs of Older People?

Edited by Jim Stewart and
Gerard Hughes, Trinity College
Dublin, Ireland

'This excellent study of the different ways countries are making use of personal pensions demonstrates how important it is to analyse these developments within the context of existing pension systems. It pursues searching questions about the extent to which personal pensions are likely to succeed in enlarging choice, promoting better support in retirement and reducing demand on public provision. The answers pose awkward challenges for policymakers.'

Fiscal Sociology and the Theory of Public Finance TEXT

An Exploratory Essay

Richard E. Wagner, George Mason University, US

'This is a highly original and creative argument by a major political economist to rethink how the public economy is studied. Instead of treating the public sector as a corrective agency for problems that may arise in the private economy, Professor Wagner proposes to study the "public square" in the same way that modern economists approach the "private square". This involves eschewing equilibrium theories and emphasizing evolutionary competitive processes, examining property rights structures, stressing the role of entrepreneurship, and, in short, applying the principles of the New Institutional Economics to government. Wagner gives many convincing examples of how to apply his approach, all to good effect. This is an important book that deserves to be read widely and taken seriously. Learning the lessons that Wagner wants to teach us holds the promise of turning the study of public economics into a proper scientific explanation of government rather than an empty exercise in evaluation and intervention.'

The Economics of Taxation NEW

Edited by James Alm, Tulane University, US

This authoritative two-volume set brings together the most important classic and contemporary papers on taxation and tax policy, written by the world's leading scholars and practitioners of taxation.

Volume I reviews the effects of taxation, optimal taxation and tax reform. Volume II presents the latest theoretical and empirical work on how taxes affect individual decisions across a range of areas, concluding with studies of the effects of taxes on firm investment and financial structure decisions.

The Elgar Guide to NEW Tax Systems

Edited by Emilio Albi, University of Madrid (Complutense), Spain and Jorge Martinez-Vazquez, Georgia State University, US

Tax systems have changed considerably in the past three decades. These fundamental changes have been the result of economic globalisation, new political stances, and also of developments in public finance thought. The chapters in this volume offer a critical review of those changes from the perspectives of tax theory, policy and tax administration practice, and the political economy of taxation. The authors also consider what sort of reforms are worth undertaking in tax policy design, tax administration and enforcement, and the assignment of sub-national taxes.

Tax and Transfer Tensions NEW

Designing Direct Tax Structures

John Creedy, Victoria University of Wellington and New Zealand Treasury

This comprehensive and lucid book is concerned with the analysis of tax design and the problems involved in choosing a tax and transfer structure. John Creedy discusses central problems which are illustrated using relatively simple models. He argues that economists can make a valuable contribution to rational policy debate by clarifying the nature of the interdependencies and relationships involved.

The Political Economy of Inter-Regional Fiscal Flows

Measurement, Determinants and Effects on Country Stability

Edited by Núria Bosch, Marta Espasa and Albert Solé Ollé, Universitat de Barcelona and Institut d'Economia de Barcelona, Spain

Struggles over what a region receives, or should receive, from the budget of the central government are common to many countries. Discussions often focus on the measures of 'net fiscal flows' or 'fiscal balances' provided by the government or other actors. This unique book shows just how these flows are computed then interpreted and clarifies the often misunderstood economic and political motives that explain why some regions receive more monies than others.

Fiscal Reforms in the Middle East

VAT in the Gulf Cooperation Council

Edited by Ehtisham Ahmad, University of Bonn, Germany and London School of Economics, UK and Abdulrazak Al Faris, Dubai Economic Council, UAE

Although oil windfalls have opened a window of opportunity for the Gulf States, at the same time they have created numerous problems. In particular, the uncertainty associated with periods of boom and bust in the oil market has made the formulation and implementation of sound fiscal policies a formidable task.

This insightful book focuses on the role of fiscal policy in common markets, especially in the context of the supranational constructs in the Gulf Cooperation Council, comprising Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Bahrain, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates and Oman. It draws on the experience of the EU and the importance of VAT, and reflects on the other main common market in Central America.

State and Local Fiscal Policy

Thinking Outside the Box?

Edited by Sally Wallace, Georgia State University, US

In this broad and illuminating work, experts on public finance discuss innovations in state and local tax policy that have been implemented or considered over the course of the last three decades. The authors provide original work that analyses whether state and local governments have 'gone outside the box' to deal with the strains of current public finances or have gotten along by adhering to the status quo. This book provides researchers, students and policy makers with evaluations and analyses by well-known scholars in the area of state and local public finance of actual practices and analysis of potential policy changes for the future.

Tax Reform in Open Economies

International and Country Perspectives

Edited by Iris Claus, The Australian National University and Inland Revenue, New Zealand, Norman Gemmill, University of Nottingham, UK, Michelle Harding, The Treasury and David White, Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand

The eminent contributors (including Altshuler, Creedy, Freebairn, Gravelle, Heady, Kalb, Sørensen and Zodrow) investigate the beneficial directions for medium-term tax reform in the light of global developments and lessons from the latest taxation research. In addressing this issue, they review recent advances in both the theoretical and empirical tax literature and reform evidence from individual countries. Topics covered include the impact of taxes on economic performance; international and corporate taxation; personal tax and welfare systems; environmental taxation; and country-specific tax reform experiences.

Taxes and the Economy

A Survey on the Impact of Taxes on Growth, Employment, Investment, Consumption and the Environment

Edited by Willem Vermeend, University of Maastricht, The Netherlands, Rick van der Ploeg, University of Oxford, UK and University of Amsterdam and Jan Willem Timmer, University of Maastricht, The Netherlands

Since World War II OECD countries have increasingly used taxation to achieve a variety of economic policy objectives of which stimulating economic activity and employment are usually the most important. The tax system is also used to create a favourable climate for investment, to spur business innovation and to promote long-term sustainable environmental policy. More recently, policies have focused on stimulating child care and encouraging citizens to work for longer. This book discusses the effects of taxation on the economy and its development. It aims to provide the reader with the necessary empirical information, while at the same time presenting an overview of the latest theory. In doing so, it touches on many relevant policy issues.

International Handbook on the Economics of Energy PB

Edited by Lester C. Hunt and Joanne Evans, University of Surrey, UK

As an essential component for economic growth, energy has a significant impact on the global economy. The need to meet growing energy demand has prompted cutting-edge innovation in clean technology in an attempt to realise environmental and cost objectives, whilst ensuring the security of energy supply. This Handbook offers a comprehensive review of the economics of energy, including contributions from a distinguished array of international specialists. It provides a thorough discussion of the major research issues in this topical field of economics.

International Handbook on Public-Private Partnerships

Edited by Graeme A. Hodge, Monash University, Australia, Carsten Greve, Copenhagen Business School, Denmark and Anthony E. Boardman, University of British Columbia, Canada

"Partnership" is a widely-used and confusing term in public management. This book pilots the reader expertly through the diverse ambitions for PPPs, and the contexts in which they have been used. It draws on the first-hand experience of politicians and managers in steering partnerships, combined with solid research and observation. A particular strength is the recognition of how PPPs are understood in various national settings, and the scope for international policy learning. The contributors write in a style which is both authoritative and accessible to students, policy-makers and professionals seeking to understand the complexities of partnership working.'

Security of Energy Supply in Europe

Natural Gas, Nuclear and Hydrogen

Edited by François Lévêque, École des Mines de Paris, France, Jean-Michel Glachant,

European University Institute RSCAS, Italy, Julián Barquín, Universidad Pontificia Comillas, Spain, Christian von Hirschhausen, University of Technology Dresden and DIW Berlin (German Institute for Economic Research), Franziska Holz, DIW Berlin, Germany and William J. Nuttall, University of Cambridge, UK

In economic, technical and political terms, the security of energy supply is of the utmost importance for Europe. Alongside competition and sustainability, supply security represents a cornerstone of the EU's energy policy, and in times of rising geopolitical conflict plays an increasingly important role in its external relations. Within this context, the contributors analyse and explore the natural gas, nuclear, and hydrogen energy sectors, which will be of critical significance for the future of energy supplies in Europe.

European Universities and the Challenge of the Market

A Comparative Analysis

Marino Regini, University of Milan, Italy

'UK academics are frequently exhorted to integrate a European (and global) perspective into their syllabuses, especially where their students are drawn from a wide variety of national backgrounds. But this is difficult when there is a dearth of detailed, accessible contemporary accounts of national practices elsewhere. This edited book goes a very long way to help them. It offers detailed, rigorously researched descriptions of the nature and effects on higher education of its "marketisation" – descriptions rooted in robust theoretical and conceptual frameworks which help the reader situate the descriptions in their own context.'

The College Cost Disease

Higher Cost and Lower Quality

Robert E. Martin, Centre College, US

College cost per student has been on the rise at a pace that matches – or exceeds – healthcare costs. Unlike healthcare, though, teaching quality has declined, and rapidly rising costs and declining quality are not trends easily forgiven by society. The College Cost Disease addresses these problems, providing a behavioral framework for the chronic cost/quality consequences with which higher education is fraught. Providing many compelling insights into the issues plaguing higher education, Robert Martin expounds upon H.R. Bowen's revenue theory of cost by detailing experience good theory, the principal/agent problem, and non-profit status.

Education and Economic Performance NEW

Edited by Alison Wolf, King's College London and Sandra McNally, London School of Economics, UK

Throughout the developed and developing worlds, education spending is seen as a key tool for government policy makers in the quest for economic growth. Promoting 'human capital' development is a prime objective for economic and education ministries. The seminal articles in this essential volume include early classics which explain why education became central to productivity debates and more recent papers which elucidate the enormous controversies in this important field.

22 articles, dating from 1964 to 2010

Contributors include: D. Acemoglu, M. Blaug, L. Dearden, E.F. Denison, C. Goldin, L.F. Katz, A.B. Krueger, S. Machin, L. Pritchett, J. Van Reenen

Higher Education in a Global Society

Edited by D. Bruce Johnstone, University at Buffalo, The State University of New York, Madeleine B. d'Ambrosio and Paul J. Yakoboski, TIAA-CREF Institute, US

'Higher Education in a Global Society should be of tremendous practical value to deans and provosts contemplating an international partnership or program. Written in a most accessible style by a combination of higher education scholars and veteran academic administrators, it provides a nuanced understanding of both the pitfalls and unanticipated benefits from such programs.'

School Accountability, Autonomy and Choice Around the World

Ludger Woessmann, Ifo Institute for Economic Research and University of Munich, Germany, Elke Luedemann, Gabriela Schuetz, Ifo Institute for Economic Research, Germany and Martin R. West, Brown University, US

Accountability, autonomy, and choice are now the watchwords of education reformers around the globe. This book provides new evidence from the international PISA test on whether students perform better in school systems with such institutional measures in place. It also provides a theoretical framework for considering such reforms and summarizes previous international evidence. The results confirm that various policies promoting accountability, autonomy, and choice are strongly associated with higher achievement for students from both disadvantaged and advantaged backgrounds. In particular, choice through public funding for private schools is associated with both higher performance overall and higher equality of opportunity.

The New Limits of Education Policy NEW

Roger Benjamin, Council for Aid to Education, US

Using a political economy framework to analyse the current problems facing US postsecondary education, The New Limits of Education Policy tackles the questions surrounding the future of higher education. The study provides an explanation of why improvement of teaching and learning is not a high priority for the stakeholders involved. Roger Benjamin explains why heightened recognition by the State of the importance of human capital in the knowledge economy will create the external conditions that will, in turn, create the need for an altered incentive system for these stakeholders. He goes on to make a case for additional positive incentives that would reward behavior that improves teaching and learning.

Education and Inequality Across Europe

Edited by Peter Dolton, Royal Holloway University of London, UK, Rita Asplund, The Research Institute of the Finnish Economy, Finland and Erling Barth, Institute for Social Research, Norway

'This volume represents a new chapter in understanding income inequality. The various authors, drawn from across Europe, not only provide rich comparative views about the extent of inequality but also go on to explain some of the causes. The composite picture of the role of education that emerges provides both researchers and policy-makers with new insights into the dynamics of economic well-being.'

The Elgar Companion to NEW Health Economics, Second Edition

Edited by Andrew M. Jones, University of York, UK

'The Elgar Companion to Health Economics is a comprehensive and accessible look at the field, as seen by its leading figures.'

— Joseph Newhouse, Harvard Medical School, US

Acclaim for the first edition:

'This Companion is a timely addition. . . It contains 50 chapters, from 90 contributors around the world, on the topical and policy-relevant aspects of health economics. . . there is a balanced coverage of theoretical and empirical materials, and conceptual and practical issues. . . I have found the Companion very useful.'

— Sukhan Jackson, Economic Analysis and Policy

'This encyclopedic work provides interested readers with an authoritative and comprehensive overview of many, if not all, of the current research issues in health economics. Highly recommended. Upper-level undergraduates and above.'

The Economics of Sport, NEW Health and Happiness

The Promotion of Well-being through Sporting Activities

Edited by Plácido Rodríguez Guerrero, Universidad de Oviedo, Spain, Stefan Késenne, University of Antwerp and Catholic University of Leuven, Belgium and Brad R. Humphreys, University of Alberta, Canada

Including an array of distinguished contributors, this novel book fills a gap in the literature by addressing an important yet under researched issue in the field of sports economics. It places great emphasis on the notion that sport is a significant component for improving the happiness, health and well-being of citizens, communities and society as a whole. In so doing, it addresses whether, in an environment of increasing pressure on public spending, governments should continue to subsidise sporting activities at the expense of other public resources.

Setting Priorities PB for HIV/AIDS Interventions

A Cost-Benefit Approach

Robert J. Brent, Fordham University, US

'Professor Brent's book is a superlative addition to the HIV/AIDS policy literature. Both non-specialists and specialists in policy evaluation will benefit from the lucid exposition of cost-benefit analysis (CBA) methods applied to the most critical and far-reaching problem that challenges social institutions and individual behavior. Essentially, Professor Brent has taken his vast experience in cost-benefit analysis, and on the ground African research, to apply CBA in a compelling and insightful manner. This book re-examines HIV/AIDS policy in Sub-Saharan countries where the devastation is an infection tsunami. . . Finding what actually works may be difficult, but Professor Brent argues persuasively that using a CBA framework is the best approach.'

Health Care TEXT and Public Policy

David Reisman, Nanyang
Technological University,
Singapore and University of Surrey, UK

Health care is absorbing an increasing share of resources in all countries. It is the task of public policy to ensure that the nation secures good quality attention at an affordable price. This book, distinguishing clearly between health status and health care, examines the ways in which governments can keep down morbidity and mortality while also ensuring that treatments are medically justifiable, economically cost-effective and socially equitable. Ignorance, uncertainty, asymmetrical information, professional monopolies, insurance, poverty all mean that the market by itself is not enough. Pragmatic intervention is also required to ensure that well-being and social justice are delivered in combination with value for money.

Migration and the Globalisation of Health Care

The Health Worker Exodus?

John Connell, University of Sydney, Australia

The international migration of health workers has been described by Nelson Mandela as the 'poaching' of desperately needed skills from under-privileged regions. This book examines the controversial recent history of skilled migration, and explores the economic and cultural rationale behind this rise of a complex global market in qualified migrants and its multifaceted outcomes.

Distributive Justice and the New Medicine

George P. Smith II, The Catholic University of America Law School, US

A major new work by one of the world's leading medical lawyers.

'While much has been written about the various issues addressed in this book – genetics, cloning, informed consent, organ donation – Smith's book moves beyond traditional legal analysis, tying these issues together by examining them through the lens of distributive justice. He thus provides the reader with a unique and valuable perspective on this important area. Distributive Justice and the New Medicine will be of interest to all those interested in health law and bioethics and in particular for those interested in distributive justice.'

Retiree Health Plans in the Public Sector

Is There a Funding Crisis?

Robert L. Clark and Melinda Sandler Morrill, North Carolina State University, US

While retiree health plans are a dying benefit in the private sector, all US states and many local governments extend health insurance coverage to their retired employees. This book is the first to thoroughly examine public sector health insurance plans. Retiree Health Plans in the Public Sector provides a detailed description of the current plans offered and compares how they vary across states.

The Dictionary of Health Economics, Second Edition

Anthony J. Culyer, University of Toronto, Canada and University of York, UK

'An essential book to steer the student away from a minefield of inaccurate and woolly definitions and an important resource of the practitioner of health economics. A book that offers the reader accuracy and rigour in the definitions it provides of key terms in health economics alongside ready access.'

– John Brazier, University of Sheffield, UK

'This Dictionary is unique. What other Dictionary borders on being an enjoyable read? Its breadth is quite astonishing. It is also very clearly a health economics Dictionary and will allow those in mainstream economics, in the other social sciences and in health sciences and health care to understand and be better able to communicate with health economists. It will also be a most useful addition to the bookshelves of health economists like myself.'

City Distribution and Urban Freight Transport NEW

Multiple Perspectives

Edited by Cathy Macharis, Vrije Universiteit Brussel, Belgium and Sandra Melo, Universidade do Porto (FEUP) and IDMEC – Instituto Superior Técnico de Lisboa, Portugal

City distribution plays a key role in supporting urban lifestyles helping to serve and retain industrial and trading activities, and contributing to the competitiveness of regional industry. Despite these positive effects, it also generates negative (economic, environmental and social) impacts on cities worldwide. Relatively little attention has been paid to these issues by researchers and policymakers until recently. The analyses found in City Distribution and Urban Freight Transport improves knowledge in this important area by recognising and evaluating the problems, with a focus on urban freight transport system.

Transportation and Economic Development Challenges

Edited by Kenneth Button, George Mason University, US and Aura Reggiani, University of Bologna, Italy

Recent years have seen considerable changes in the technology of transportation with the development of high-speed rail networks, more fuel-efficient automobiles and aircraft, and the widespread adoption of informatics in disciplines such as traffic management and supply chain logistics. The contributions to this volume assess transportation interactions with employment and income, examine some of the policies that have been deployed to maximize the economic and social impacts of transportation provision at the local and regional levels and analyse how advances in transportation technologies have, and will, impact future development.

Transport Economics, 3rd Edition TEXT PB

Kenneth Button, George Mason University, US

'In the 3rd edition of Transport Economics Button draws together the burgeoning literature in transportation economics. It is a comprehensive standalone text covering all aspects of the field including new sections on logistics and congestion pricing. It should be required reading for every student of transportation and on the library shelf of all transportation researchers and practitioners, an excellent book.'

– David Gillen, University of British Columbia, Canada

Acclaim for the second edition:

'To the literature in the field of transport economics, this is a most welcome addition. Primarily a textbook on theory, it also contains many references to applied studies. . . The book is written in a lucid style and consequently is easy to read and understand.'

– J.P. Hanlon, Transport

This successful and widely adopted textbook has been thoroughly revised and updated for the third edition. As the best intermediate text currently available, it will be welcomed by students, policymakers and all those concerned with the supply of transport services.

New Developments in Transport Planning

Advances in Dynamic Traffic Assignment

Edited by Chris M.J. Tampère, Francesco Viti and Lambertus H. (Ben) Immers, Katholieke Universiteit Leuven, Belgium

Traffic assignment is a set of criteria through which the demand for mobility is distributed over the links of a transport network. Over the last 30 years, Dynamic Traffic Assignment (DTA) models have been developed to support time-dependent analyses in nascent fields that need to take into account the temporal distribution of demand and supply. In this book, leading international experts in the field provide a state-of-the-art overview of fundamental DTA research and practice, identifying weaknesses and major challenges for future research.
